Getting through 2020, with all its uncertainties, impelled us to reinvent ourselves every day. We reach this moment with satisfaction for seeing CEBRI gain a new dimension, expanding its reach and recognition and further fulfilling its mission as a think tank.

We held 135 events with a total audience of 150,000 people. In this document, you will find the links to the recording of all of this year’s events. Among the many themes on our agenda, in 2020 we dedicated special attention to discussing and reflecting upon geopolitics and foreign policy.

In addition to the discussion panels, we launched 46 publications, which are also available in the following pages.

Throughout the year, we restructured some of our thematic programs, totaling twelve fronts of work. In 2021, we will launch position papers with CEBRI’s recommendations on the respective areas.

We would like to thank our team for the unity and strength that were so important this year, and our trustees and fellows for their constant presence and support. We thank our countless Brazilian and international partners, and, finally, we would like to highlight the fundamental support from our members, who continue to be with us, recognizing CEBRI’s value for Brazil.

Warm regards,

2020 Highlights
01

Expanded reach in 2020

We reached 150,000 people with our 135 events this year, which brought together national and international experts and personalities, such as Amin Maalouf, Jeffrey Sachs, Joseph Nye, Ian Bremmer, Mario Vargas Llosa, Martin Wolf and Yanis Varoufakis.

150,000 PEOPLE REACHED

02

Multilateralism in focus

The reorientation of multilateralism and the challenges imposed by the global crisis were the central themes discussed within the partnership between CEBRI and the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung (KAS) in 2020. The initiative resulted in seven discussion panels and seventeen publications, and connected approximately 7,000 people from thirty countries.

03

Partnership with the Council on Foreign Relations on strategic issues

The Belt and Road Initiative was the focus of a two-day online workshop held by CEBRI and the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) in the United States. Experts discussed topics such as development finance, digital governance, and media and civil society in the context of China-Latin America relations.
The Biden Administration: what changes for Brazil?

In this series of online meetings, CEBRI brought together intellectuals, members of the diplomatic corps, and market experts to discuss the prospects for Brazil in the context of the new US administration. The first meeting, with Ambassadors Sergio Amaral and Rubens Ricupero, was one of CEBRI’s most-viewed events of the year.

XVII Forte de Copacabana Conference reaches 45 thousand people

The main event on international defense and security in Latin America was held fully online for the first time. The conference was broadcast in three languages to more than 45 countries. It had 4,000 participants and reached 45,000 people via social networks.

The Brazil-Argentina Dialogues marked a new phase for CEBRI’s South America Program

Experts from both countries analyzed the Brazil-Argentina relationship from a regional and global perspective, in five online meetings. Among the topics covered were bilateral political and economic relations; cooperation in the commercial and nuclear fields; energy and sustainability; and defense and security.
The restructuring of some of CEBRI’s programs marked the 2nd half of the year

In 2020, CEBRI’s South America, United States, and Europe Programs gained new leadership and launched new work plans for 2021. These Programs, along with the Asia Program, are part of CEBRI’s regional agenda and are dedicated to a purposeful discussion and analysis regarding Brazil’s relations with its main partners in the world.

Wider and stronger network

For the second consecutive year, we increased the number of members. Our network has been strengthened and currently comprises 108 members representing diverse segments, including companies, consulates and embassies, as well as individual members.
Diversified content production

Considering collections of articles, policy papers, reports, among others, in 2020 CEBRI produced 46 publications about Brazil’s challenges and global trends such as the impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic; the future of energy; the economics of innovation and the technological revolution; the crisis of multilateralism; and the reorganization of global geopolitics.

Vice President Hamilton Mourão received proposals from CEBRI

As part of the series of closed meetings that CEBRI organized, the meeting with the Vice President of Brazil had the participation of some of CEBRI’s trustees and members, and presented proposals for a positive Brazil-China agenda, as well as for the strengthening of the National Council of the Amazon (Conselho Nacional da Amazônia), in view of the country’s environmental, energy and agricultural potential.

The objective of the Multilateralism Program is to produce studies, analyses and discussions that generate proposals to guide and inform the Brazilian strategy in the international order. Brazil has always been particularly active in the multilateral debate. However, since the 1990s, multilateralism has been going through successive crises, part of them justified by the new global power configurations and intensified by the Covid-19 pandemic.

This program’s vision is to contribute to Brazil’s insertion in the future of energy. Its objective, in this sense, is to promote debate on relevant issues that have the potential to leverage the insertion of the Brazilian industry in global chains, that are aligned with energy trends, and able to influence the development of public policies in the creation of an investment environment that is competitive and attractive.

Em um mundo sem moderação

Por Rubens Peixoto - 05/03/2023 - 18:10

Na visão de Cristiano Mello, temos várias perspectivas para entender o mundo, desde o grupo de pessoas e suas ideias. Outras, de acordo com o想了不協, o entrelaço do Brasil e do mundo, é importante que as ideias sejam compartilhadas e debatidas.

Como serão as cidades no pós-pandemia

Mário de Carvalho e José Alves têm ideias sobre como as cidades serão no futuro, com base no trabalho e pessoas. São necessários novos conceitos para transportar essas ideias.

About CEBRI

The Brazilian Center for International Relations (CEBRI) is an independent think tank that contributes to the construction of Brazil’s international agenda. For over twenty years, the institution has been dedicated to promoting a plural and purposeful debate on the international scene and Brazilian foreign policy.

WORK FRONTS

STRUCTURED WORK
Twelve interdisciplinary thematic Programs that promote a purposeful debate on international relations, focusing on national development and Brazil’s insertion in the global scenario.

INDEPENDENT THINKING
A non-profit, independent and non-partisan civil society institution.

QUALIFIED AND RELIABLE CONTENT
Highly qualified specialists in different areas of knowledge and with multiple views, including trustees, senior fellows, members, and partners.

INFLUENCE ON PUBLIC POLICY FORMULATION
High engagement capacity of the main representatives of the public, private and civil society sectors in all the initiatives carried out.

PUBLIC RECOGNITION
Consistently listed as one of the main think tanks in Latin America, according to the world’s leading ranking, organized by the University of Pennsylvania. In addition to being the second main think tank in South and Central America, CEBRI occupies the first regional position in the categories of environmental policy and defense and national security.

Our members are strategic partners in building proposals and effective solutions to expand Brazil’s international insertion and its position in the global scenario.

Being a CEBRI member means:

- Contact with recognized experts, private sector leaders, government leaders, and policy-makers.
- Having unique networking and collaboration opportunities at restricted events and meetings.
- Having access to analyses of relevant topics, from national, regional, and global perspectives.
- Having a transversal view of emerging trends, in Brazil and the world, and anticipate opportunities and risk factors.

For more information about CEBRI membership, please contact us at institutional@cebri.org.br.
